

Angaje: the Early Years - Explorations into the history, society and culture of indentured immigrants and their descendants in Mauritius

Volume 1, 2012

The papers in this series Angaje: Explorations into the history, society and culture of indentured immigrants in Mauritius are organized into three volumes, each covering different aspects at various stages in the history of indentureship and its legacy.

Volume I: The Early Years focuses on the setting up of the indentured system, the first immigrants who arrived and the geographic, social and cultural origins of immigrants from India and the experiences of people who lived through the transition from slaves to contract labour.

These 3 volumes are the most important multidisciplinary publication ever done by Aapravasi Ghat Trust Fund and it contains more than 25 articles and subchapters by more than 30 local and foreign writers, scholars, historians and researchers. It covers different fields of study such as history- social and local, archaeological, anthropology, pedagogy, ethnography, oral history and life stories of immigrants.
