

'Discovering our Country's Indenture Sites: The History of Forbach Sugar Estate (1818-1943)' by S.Peerthum of AGTF retraces the history of Forbach Sugar Estate, its slaves, indentured immigrants, Mauritian estate workers, and owners. This booklet looks at the genesis, establishment, and the decline of this important Mauritian sugar estate and the lives and labour of its workers from the late 1810s until the early 1940s. It narrates how Forbach was transformed from a minor estate into one of the most important sugar estates in the north of Mauritius. It provides valuable insights into the experiences and the contributions of the Franco-Mauritian owners, slaves, apprentices, indentured workers, and the Mauritian workers of Forbach. (This booklet was launched in July 2018).
